

A BOUND OF HOT SHOT

Col. W. D. Moore Fires a Volley into the Anti-Prohibition Ranks.

HE HITS DEALERS AND AGNOSTICS

Hon. John F. Drake Talks Temperance in a Southside Church.

OTHER AMENDMENT MEETINGS NOTED.

Colonel W. D. Moore made an address in the Moorhead building yesterday afternoon in which he took occasion in his opening remarks to repel an attack which had been made upon him by an evening paper. Passing from this, he took up the speeches made at the Brewers' Convention, in which he called the members "Dutch bums," "Dutch donkeys," and other pet names. "This is all I can call them," he said. "They say they are church workers in Pennsylvania. They buy votes! Why, they are unworthy to unlace the shoes of any Christian woman in this city. That little boy in the audience does not have a vote—if he had one, he would vote for prohibition; but the Italian rascals whom I saw naturalized yesterday will go and vote against prohibition. God bless my soul! they are only half civilized, and they have no more right to vote than that boy! I remarked to a friend that they should be civilized before they are naturalized."

DRAWING IT FORBIDLY.

The speaker pointed out the dangers of liquor drinking and the many graves that have been filled by friends who had died drunkards. He concluded his remarks on that phase of the subject by saying: "May God Almighty's curse come down on the whisky and everything connected with it." Continuing, he said he had no more right to vote than that boy! I remarked to a friend that they should be civilized before they are naturalized."

"Many of our city politicians show it in their looks," he remarked, "and they have no more right to vote than that boy! I remarked to a friend that they should be civilized before they are naturalized."

"I am in favor of the amendment, not from personal reasons, but on the ground of public policy. One liquor dealer told me he had $50,000 worth of stock. What did he give this city in return? Nothing but misery, crime and debauchery. "There are two things I wish to say to you. We are not a city of sinners. We are a city of workers. We are a city of men. Each day you are near the judgment seat of God, and must answer to Him. There are men who deny the existence of God. They are agnostics. They say they know nothing. Then why, in the name of God Almighty, are they trying to teach us who do know something?"

A TOUR OF INVESTIGATION.

A New York Editor Who Has Been to Kansas Describes the Temperance Situation—Dr. Boyle Talks to the Workmen.

The Sons of Temperance had charge of the meeting in the Opera House last night, and had the largest audience that has attended any of these weekly gatherings. William Houston, Grand Secretary of the Sons of Temperance, presided. Rev. T. N. Boyle was the first speaker. In the course of his remarks he spoke in the highest terms of T. V. Powderly. He said he was in hearty sympathy with Mr. Powderly's efforts to stop drinking among the workmen, and in hearty sympathy with his order and the principles on which it was based. The speaker asserted that the cause of the workmen losing in their big strikes in this State was whisky.

While Mr. Boyle was speaking he was interrupted by a noisy fellow in the gallery. Finally the speaker lost patience and said: "That fellow is a fair representative of the saloons. He is too cowardly to come down on this platform and show himself. I dare him to do so."

The house applauded, but the man in the gallery did not come down nor did he interrupt again.

L. A. Maynard, one of the editors of the New York Observer, followed Mr. Boyle. The Observer has never taken a position on the prohibition question and to decide it prohibition was worth supporting. He said Mr. Maynard to Kansas to investigate and he is now on his way home. He said he was in all of the larger cities and many of the smaller towns.

As the result of his labors he would not say that prohibition was a failure; neither would he say it was an unequal success. He would say that he could not find an equal nation in all the world where the public sentiment was overwhelmingly in favor of prohibition, and the almost invincible answer to his question was that the law had been broken.

Mr. Maynard had a Pittsburgh Sunday paper which published two accounts of prohibition. One was a fair and honest account of the man who furnished the statement that prohibition is a failure in rather a rough manner. Among other things he said that this was the only man in the liquor district who was not a member of the Sons of Temperance, and that he was a fair and honest man.

An open temperance meeting was held at the junction of Ross and High streets yesterday afternoon, conducted by the Rev. Dr. Starr, of Bellevue, made an address, and Mrs. and Miss Starr also made a few remarks. There was a large crowd present.

A CAMPAIGN ADDRESS.

Hon. John F. Drake Talks in Favor of the Constitutional Amendment.

Hon. John F. Drake, of Kansas, delivered an address last evening on the subject of the Constitutional amendment in the Bingham Street Church.

TWO LEADERS MEET.

President McBride and Master Workman Rea Converse Pleasantly.

A CONTRADICTORY STATEMENT.

The Miners' Wage Scale Will Likely be Settled This Afternoon.

STRENGTH OF ORGANIZED COALMERS.

Two great labor leaders, the heads of rival organizations met yesterday afternoon for the first time and greeted each other very cordially, although they had been making contradictory claims for some time past. They were John B. Rea, President of the Miners' National Progressive Union, and John P. McBride, President of the Miners' National Progressive Union.

Rea, Master Workman of N. T. A. 133, K. of L., composed of coal miners. The two gentlemen had been acquainted, but had not met since their elevation to the high positions they now hold.

President McBride states that the N. P. U. is on top, and the K. of L. miners are, to use a slang expression, "in the soup." Master Workman Rea made a similar statement, but transposed the names, saying that the K. of L. was on top.

A representative of this paper saw both gentlemen separately and received from them the alleged standing of their organizations. Both sides claimed supremacy and offered to prove their statements, but the offers were not taken. Mr. Rea was to meet Mr. McBride at 10 o'clock, but he did not appear. Mr. McBride, however, did appear, and he accepted the invitation. The DISPATCH reporter accompanied him to Mr. McBride's room in the Home Hotel and the two gentlemen shook hands and greeted each other very pleasantly. Although they are both working hard to kill the rival organizations, they seemed to be very much pleased over the fact that they had met.

JUST COMPARING NOTES.

In order to obtain some correct figures as to the standing of the two organizations the DISPATCH reporter put two questions to each of them. President McBride was asked: "What is the membership of the National Progressive Union, and what is the membership of the N. T. A. 133, K. of L.?" He merely smiled and declined to answer either question. The same questions were reversed and put to Mr. Rea, and he said: "We have from 19,000 to 20,000 members, and I do not know how many members the N. P. U. has got altogether."

This was all that was said on the subject, and the conversation was turned to the eighth-hour movement. Mr. John Flannery, who was present, joined in the conversation and upheld the Knights of Labor. Mr. McBride said that the eighth-hour movement was started by the Knights of Labor several years ago, but no attempt had been made to enforce it. Mr. Flannery stated that when the American Federation of Trades Unions was organized, it was to enforce it. He said that the Knights of Labor were not asked to assist, and consequently they could not expect any support or sympathy from the American Federation of Trades Unions. He said that the eighth-hour movement was started by the Knights of Labor, and that the American Federation of Trades Unions was to enforce it.
